CASTLEBERRY HILL

Castleberry Hill, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, is made up of historic warehouses that have been converted into residential lofts, restaurants, pubs, art galleries, salons, and coffee shops. Adjacent to the rail lines that were integral in Atlanta's formation, Castleberry Hill has become an artist's haven. The neighborhood hosts an annual loft tour that showcases the dramatic conversions from former manufacturing plants, warehouses, and meat packing buildings.

SONO

OLD FOURTH WARD

SoNo, or South of North Avenue, is a diverse neighborhood that connects the heart of Downtown to Midtown. One of Downtown's earliest redeveloped residential areas, SoNo truly offers a mix of all residential housing types—single family homes, town homes, apartments, high-rise condos, and garden-style condos. The neighborhood also has a mix of commercial uses and boasts claim to the Bank of America Building—the tallest building in the Southeast. In addition, SoNo is home to many restaurants and has an active nightlife.

The Old Fourth Ward, largely made up of single family residential units, is one of the oldest residential areas in the city of Atlanta. Now, the redevelopment of City Hall East and the Atlanta Beltline is spurring development on the east, and the King Historic District is creating excitement on the west of the Old Fourth Ward. This area is poised to experience a boom in redevelopment in the coming years.

CENTENNIAL OLYMPIC PARK

CENTENNIAL HILL

The creation of Centennial Olympic Park for the 1996 Summer Olympic Games prompted much development directly surrounding the park. Home not only to pre-Olympic cornerstones like CNN Center, the area is now home to the Georgia Aquarium, Philips Arena and the new World of Coca-Cola, opening in summer of 2007. With close to 3 million annual guests to the Park, another 3+ million visitors to the Aquarium, and close to a million anticipated at the World of Coca-Cola, this area has the opportunity to capture the interest of these visitors with new retail, restaurants, and hospitality developments.

The Centennial Hill neighborhood is an area rich with new investment. In recent years, the area has become home to new residential condominium buildings, Imagine It! The Children's Museum of Atlanta, and the new headquarters of the Southern Company. Twenty acres of the area are being redeveloped into Allen Plaza, a multi-block, mixed use projects including new office, residential, luxury hotel, and restaurant space that will be completed in a number of phases over the coming years.

FAIRLIE-POPLAR

Fairlie-Poplar was Atlanta's turn-of-the-century central business district and today many of the buildings are over 100 years old. Much of the area is designated as a National Register Historic District, and many of the city's oldest high-rise buildings found here have recently been converted to condominiums and apartments or higher education uses by Georgia State University. The area exudes a human scale neighborly feel with a high concentration of residents, restaurants, nightlife, and the arts all within close proximity to each other.

GEORGIA STATE

The Georgia State area is defined by an array of uses: various retail outlets, office space, and institutional establishments. In addition to the activity at Grady Memorial Hospital, the exponential growth of Georgia State University has made the area vibrant at all hours of the day. The regular programming at Woodruff Park offers an outdoor respite to office workers and students. The area is also the home of Georgia State University's forthcoming new 2,000-bed student housing complex.

MEMORIAL DRIVE CORRIDOR

Memorial Drive connects the government district of Atlanta with some of the city's most quickly revitalizing residential neighborhoods, including Grant Park and East Atlanta. As a result, the corridor has experienced significant investment in recent years. For instance, two former public housing projects are being redeveloped into mixed-income communities. Additionally, new loft developments overlooking Oakland Cemetery are underway.

NORTHSIDE DRIVE CORRIDOR

The Northside Drive Corridor, once considered solely as an alternate route to the Downtown Connector, is now becoming a hub of real estate activity. Recent developments include the Northyards Business Park, a redeveloped railroad round house transformed into a modern-day business park, as well as larger mixed use and residential projects. With the Georgia World Congress Center and Georgia Dome on one side of the corridor and the residential neighborhoods of English Avenue and Vine City on the other, Northside Drive is expected to emerge as an eclectic and vibrant corridor.

NEIGHBORHOOD AMENITIES:

- Northyards Business Park
- The Georgia Dome
- Bauder College
- Antioch Baptist Church North
- The Georgia World Congress Center
- Vine City MARTA Station

CENTENNIAL PLACE

Centennial Place is a 60-acre community bordering the Georgia Institute of Technology and Centennial Olympic Park. With the first phases completed in 1996 in time for the Olympic Games, Centennial Place replaced the former Techwood and Clark Howell Homes, and it has received recognition nationwide for both planning and site design. This walkable community truly feels like a neighborhood and boasts rental and for-sale units that attract a diverse group of residents.

NEIGHBORHOOD AMENITIES:

- Centennial Place Elementary School: Kindergarten through 5th grade magnet school
- Neighborhood YMCA/Community Center
- Close proximity to Centennial Olympic Park, Georgia Tech and the North Ave MARTA Station

MARIETTA ARTERY

Previously an industrial corridor formed along the Western and Atlanta Railroad, this historic neighborhood went into decline in the 1960's as tenants closed shop. However, in recent years many adaptive reuse projects have sparked interest in the area once again. Many of these historic buildings have been rehabilitated and now stand as office and residential lofts, restaurants and art galleries.

NEIGHBORHOOD AMENITIES:

- Atlanta Contemporary Arts Center
- King Plow Arts Center
- The Coca-Cola Company World Headquarters
- Puritan Mill loft offices and the Foundry

ADJOINING

NEIGHBORHOODS

The mix of diverse and unique neighborhoods does not stop at Downtown's boundaries. In fact, directly adjacent to Downtown there are a number of intown neighborhoods—each with its own distinct identity and character. The recent wave of investment in these neighborhoods has brought higher home prices and the growing residential base is no longer just urban pioneers. The residents range from young professionals to families; and students to retirees. Many are former suburbanites moving closer to their work to avoid long commutes and falling in love with dense, urban environments where they can live, work, learn and play.

➡ MIDTOWN

Directly to the north of Downtown, Midtown is an evolving and cosmopolitan urban center with a mix of residential, commercial, arts, and cultural venues.

➡ VIRGINIA-HIGHLAND

Virginia-Highland, an historic neighborhood of six distinct commercial “villages”, abounds with small restaurants, lively bars, and a diverse mix of shopping experiences.

➡ INMAN PARK

Inman Park, a residential area full of classically restored homes, was Atlanta's first planned community and is regarded as one of the nation's first garden suburbs.

➡ CABBAGETOWN

Developed around the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, which have been redeveloped into loft housing, Cabbagetown is now an eclectic neighborhood with a mix of independent businesses, restaurants, and local artist shops.

➡ GRANT PARK

The Grant Park neighborhood is named for Lemuel P. (L.P.) Grant, a civil engineer for the Georgia Railroad who has been called the “Father of Atlanta.” As a neighborhood, this area began to be populated in the 1890's. Craftsmen built many of the architecturally distinctive homes seen there today. ZooAtlanta is located in Grant Park.

➡ SUMMERHILL

Summerhill began as Atlanta's first African-American real estate development soon after the Civil War. During the early 1900s, the neighborhood was home to a diverse group of residents including Atlanta's first Jewish and Greek communities. Through the efforts of Summerhill Neighborhood Development, Inc. and the Organized Neighbors of Summerhill, this neighborhood is experiencing significant revitalization and quickly regaining its former stature in the community.

➡ MECHANICSVILLE

Mechanicsville is located one mile south of Downtown Atlanta. It is bordered by I-20 to the north, the I-75/I-85 connector to the east, and the Norfolk Southern rail yard to the west and south. Like the city itself, Mechanicsville grew up around the railroad lines. The neighborhood was named for the concentration of rail yards and repair shops that were located in the area.

➡ WEST END

The West End Historic District contains a rich mixture of architectural styles of the types popular in Georgia cities (and throughout the United States) during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The West End Neighborhood Development, Inc. is continually working to improve the socioeconomic position of the community and its residents, and as a result, home prices are on the rise and countless renovations are under way.

➡ ATLANTA UNIVERSITY CENTER

A progressive force in the development of the African-American community in Atlanta, Atlanta University Center houses six institutions of higher learning including Clark Atlanta University, Morehouse College, Morehouse School of Medicine, Spelman College, Morris Brown College, and the Interdenominational Theological Center.

➡ VINE CITY

Vine City, apparently named for the Vine Street that runs through the neighborhood, is located just west of the Georgia Dome. The neighborhood changed rapidly as people moved to Atlanta's west side after a fire destroyed many homes on Auburn Avenue in 1917. A commercial district sits on Martin Luther King, Jr. Drive.

➡ ENGLISH AVENUE

To the northwest of Downtown, along Northside Drive, is the English Avenue area. Antioch Baptist Church North has assembled more than 38 acres over the past 15 years in the surrounding area. The church set up a community development organization called Bethursday Development Corp. and it is building mixed-market rate/affordable-unit projects both here and in Vine City.
